

Director - Adult Congenital Heart Disease, Washington University School of Medicine and Barnes-Jewish Hospital

Summary:

Participate in the diagnosis and management of patient with adult congenital heart disease. Interest in cardiac imaging, including 2-D transthoracic, transesophageal, 3D, and stress echocardiography and diagnostic cardiac catheterization is desirable. Participate in training general cardiology and advanced ACHD fellows and clinical research.

Position Description

The Division of Cardiology, Department of Medicine, at Washington University School of Medicine is conducting a search for an Associate Professor or Professor of Medicine to join the Center for Adults with Congenital Heart Disease at Barnes-Jewish Hospital/Washington University School of Medicine to lead the section of ACHD. The candidate should be an MD or MD/PhD with training and experience in adult congenital heart disease. The candidate should be board-certified in adult or pediatric cardiology and adult congenital heart disease.

Washington University and St Louis are recognized nationally and internationally for research in medicine, science, and biotechnology. St. Louis offers four seasons with an outstanding sports, cultural, and educational environment; it is a culturally diverse and family-oriented city.

Applicants should mail or e-mail to: Sumanth Prabhu, MD (prabhu@wustl.edu) his/her curriculum vitae and a letter stating career goals to the: Washington University School of Medicine, Division of Cardiology, 660 South Euclid Avenue, Campus Box 8086, St. Louis, MO 63110.

Please submit your application to: <https://facultyopportunities.wustl.edu> . Select Department of Medicine; Adult Congenital Heart Disease Faculty